Chen Leads The Four Seasons (November 13)

Warbling birds, trickling streams, summer storms, barking dogs, icy landscapes — Vivaldi pioneered the art of painting nature through music with his blazingly original Four Seasons. Concertmaster Robert Chen takes on these seminal concertos and leads Mahler's orchestral rendering of Beethoven's Serioso Quartet and Mozart's exquisitely crafted Divertimento in B-flat Major.

Songs of Love and Farewell (April 11)

Why are we here, and what comes next? Throughout time, humans have wrestled with these questions, resulting in compositions like Richard Strauss' radiant swan song, Rachmaninov's haunting depiction of the journey of souls to the afterlife, Janáček's portrait of hope and solidarity in a Siberian prison camp and Wagner's spine-tingling meditation on eternal love.

Civic Orchestra of Chicago Teen Night

Teen Night tickets become available two weeks before the date of the event and cost $5 for teens and any accompanying adults or children. A ticket is required to access the evening's event and concert. No separate ticket or RSVP is required for the Teen Night preconcert event.

The CSOA recommends people ages 13-19 attend Teen Night. Stay tuned for more information about alternative places for accompanying adults and children to gather during the Teen Night preconcert event. CSOA staff members, a Symphony Center House Manager and ushers will manage and supervise the event.

Civic Plays Price & Dvořák (March 2)

Ken-David Masur leads the Civic Orchestra in works by three titans of Black excellence in American music, starting with gems by George Walker and Ulysses Kay. Florence Price's Ethiopia's Shadow in America portrays an enslaved man's spiritual journey from the time of his arrival on this continent. Antonin Dvořák, a vital early champion of American music, imbues his lyrical and exuberant Seventh Symphony with admiration and hope for his own native Czech Republic.
